TRICOT

TRICOT is a modular outdoor lounging system of radical spatial flexibility. Its name—from the French “tricoter”, to knit—signals both its aesthetic and its ambition: a woven surface that mimics the rhythm and tactile depth of knitted fabric, carried across sculptural, continuously curved shells.

What sets TRICOT apart is the range of forms it can take. Individual elements form furniture modules that combine freely into sofas, L-shapes, U-shapes, or daybeds—any configuration a setting demands. Some modules are designed to stand alone, while others gain meaning only as part of the whole. It even accommodates vis-à-vis arrangements with alternating backrests.

The natural world gave the collection its palette and proportion. TRICOT channels that sensibility directly: its curved modules fit together to create a landscape within a landscape, drawing people inward. The natural hues—Oat Knit, a warm wheat-and-straw tone, and Haze Knit, a muted reed-like green-beige—echo this atmosphere, deepening and shifting as daylight moves across the knitted surface.

“Tricot is a collection that could only exist in collaboration with DEDON. It expresses the brand’s mastery of hand-woven fiber in a way that feels both technically advanced and rooted in craftsmanship.”

In every considered interior, the floor is part of the design—not background, but a surface as intentional as anything above it. With RIBBONS, that idea moves outdoors. The outdoor rug collection introduces craft, warmth, and material presence to the ground plane for the first time: broad woven ribbons interlaced at terrace scale, defining space, anchoring settings, and enabling the kind of barefoot, unhurried living that belongs naturally to DEDON environments.

RIBBONS extends DEDON’s craft philosophy—the conviction that how something is made is its design—into a new surface category. The collection comprises two formats constructed through two distinct techniques and expressed in colorways drawn from three nature-inspired families. The rectangular rug is formed from woven knitted straps interlaced in a graphic grid, while the round format is created through braided coiling, produced in Italy exclusively for DEDON. Two ancient craft logics, one unified language of making.

Placed beneath a DEDON setting, RIBBONS does not simply cover the ground—it completes it.

A single new
A significant addition.

MACADAMIA - NEW COLOR

For Sebastian Herkner, outdoor furniture begins with a feeling: the sensation of being embraced. That gesture first defined MBACE, whose open, enveloping shell and triaxial weave have made it one of DEDON's most enduring collections. Today, the same language extends through MDEAR—a modular lounging system of sculptural, organic islands that can stand alone or connect into expansive social landscapes.

Both collections are shaped by the logic of nature rather than the right angle. Their continuously curved forms draw from leaves, dunes, and sheltering bays, while their hand-woven surfaces bring graphic rhythm, tactile warmth, and a distinctly interior quality to outdoor settings. In MDEAR, the signature triaxial pattern of MBACE is scaled into a broader, more generous expression across fully woven lounge modules, creating open and closed rhythms that shift with every curve.

This year, MBACE and MDEAR welcome macadamia into the palette – a warm neutral that bridges the two collections in a shared color language. Soft, organic, and quietly luminous, it brings a new coherence to settings composed across the Herkner family.

“I wanted to use the traditional technique of the weaving to create a strong design that was like a gesture — the gesture of embracing someone.”

When Sebastian Herkner introduced MDEAR, he created a modular outdoor lounging system where sculptural, organic modules form sweeping social landscapes or function as individual solitaires—each piece equally resolved on its own and within a larger composition.

MDEAR URBAN extends this vision with a complementary series of concrete coffee tables, a side table, and planters. These are not accessories, but essential components that transform a furniture arrangement into a spatial environment.

The new elements retain the soft, rounded silhouettes of MDEAR while introducing a material counterpoint: ultra-high-performance concrete in warm, natural tones inspired by stone, earth, and weathered landscapes. Organic oval and circular tabletops rest on central cylindrical bases, while the planters take on overlapping, petal-like forms that bring vertical variation and a sense of natural growth to a setting.

Together, woven fiber and matte concrete create a dialogue between two craft traditions—one tactile and enveloping, the other grounded and architectural. Designed for terraces, courtyards, rooftops, and hotel gardens, MDEAR URBAN allows the MBRACE and MDEAR family to extend beyond seating, shaping complete outdoor environments with the same clarity, softness, and material integrity.

"KIDA Porch builds upon DEDON's core principles of luxury, comfort and freedom outdoors, in wholly new ways."

Stephen Burks & Malika Leiper

KIDA PORCH by Stephen Burks & Malika Leiper

KIDA arrived as a gesture. With its wrapped aluminum frame and cradle-like organic form, Stephen Burks Man Made created a collection as delightful to behold as to sit in—open, airy, and unmistakably inviting. Since its introduction, KIDA has furnished terraces, gardens, poolsides, and porches around the world, rooted in the idea that outdoor furniture should feel like a place you want to return to.

KIDA Porch deepens that gesture. Inspired by a bespoke interpretation created for the 2025 U.S. Pavilion at the 19th Venice Architecture Biennale, the collection was conceived to honor the spirit of the porch—a threshold between inside and outside, private and public, strangers and community.

Burks turned to KIDA and to the African American quilting tradition of Gee’s Bend, Alabama, as primary references. The quilters of Gee’s Bend have produced some of the most significant abstract works in American art—from salvaged cloth, in patterns that are simultaneously rigorous and free, rooted in necessity and elevated into art.

From this reference, Burks developed the KIDA Porch cushion: two quilted layers in DEDON fabric CALEO, carefully composed into a quilt-like upholstery that extends KIDA’s wrapped aluminum frame into new territory—warmth, softness, and tactility.

The system consists of two quilted layers connected with snap fasteners and attached with Velcro holders. Each layer contains a foam core for structure and comfort, with enhanced support in the seat and backrest zones. A curated two-tone textile gives each piece depth and tonal richness. Two distinct versions explore different color compositions—each a complete expression of KIDA’s identity, legible as both collection and individual piece.

Three mushroom-shaped lamps are arranged on a light-colored surface. Each lamp has a wide, conical shade made of a woven material, likely wicker or rattan, and a narrower, conical base with a perforated design. The lamps are illuminated from within, casting a warm, golden glow. The lamp in the foreground is slightly to the left and lower than the other two, which are positioned further back and to the right. The background is a soft, out-of-focus light blue and white.

THE OTHERS by Stephen Burks

Meet THE OTHERS, an anthropomorphic lighting collection that moves between design and decorative art. Playful, colorful, sculptural, and sophisticated, it consists of hand-woven lanterns that function as illuminated characters—individually expressive or arranged in totem-like formations. With its expanded modular system, every piece can now be combined across colorways, enabling compositions that feel personal, unexpected, and entirely self-directed. Optional hand-made acrylic eyes add a final spark of personality—humor, curiosity, and a hint of mischief.

THE OTHERS began as an exploration of how places and people are imagined and often misunderstood. Stephen Burks translated this reflection into a collection of abstract figures that hold presence without fixed identity: characters shaped as much by imagination as by material. Each piece is hand-woven, following a shared structure but never identical in outcome—a community of distinct voices held within a common language.

This year, THE OTHERS welcomes three new vivid colorways: Meadow, Earth, and Cloud. Paired with lipari frames, the new palette brings a lighter, more open expression to the collection—fresh green vibrancy, warm sun-baked brown, and airy neutrality—while maintaining the graphic depth and visual personality that define every piece.

THE OTHERS is now also integrated with the Smart Lumen LED system, offering eight-step dimming via remote control and compatibility with Matter smart home ecosystems. A new internal acrylic light guide runs through the full height of each lantern, enriching the woven surface with a more continuous, even, and atmospheric glow.

The word “AERA” comes from the Latin aer—“air.” It immediately evokes lightness, openness, and a sense of breathing space: something airy and modern, light, without ever appearing weightless.

This quality beautifully captures the character of bouclé. Its soft, undulating surface seems to hold air within it—at once gently shaped and effortlessly light. The subtle, flowing curves of the weave carry the same gentle movement that the name suggests: a texture that breathes and gently ripples rather than sitting still.

AERA is a name that conveys elegance, comfort, and a harmonious blend of design and nature—the tactile warmth of bouclé, enhanced by a sense of lightness and open air.
